Maclean for $25, being commission on the sale of a hulk belonging to Mr. Fraser-Smith, from whom defendant had held a power of attorney, and $250 for services rendered on the Hongkong Telegraph staff. His Lordship held that in the absence of an express contract in the latter case t was impossible to say what the parties really meant or what they expected when their hasty arrangements were made. He thought however, that it could not be inferred that payment was implied or understood as a matter of course, and judgment must be for defendant with costs. .In the matter of the gunboat, the property belonged to Mr. Fraser-Smith, and no arrangement was ever made that plaintiff was to get any commission on its sale. If parties would not make proper arrangements the law could not make them. The onus of proof was on the plaintiff, and he had failed. In the counte action for $50; money lent, Mr. Pitman had not shown any proof of the circumstances alleged in defence. Judgment for plaintiff with costs. In the matter of the promissory note (Maclean) v. Pitman) judgment was not yet given.

THE CAPTURED KOLAO HUI LEADER.

But Chen was not a man to easily surprised; he drew a sword fruit under his pillow and defied his would-be captors who however, had expected resistance and arranged their plan of attack—to sush upon the enemy simultaneously and overpower him. only drawback to this plan was that Chen might call for assistance and bring his gang to the rescue. Strange to say; Chen gave no alarm either because of utter contempt of his adversaries and of personal danger, or because he did not wish to have others of the band brought into conflict with the runners. At any rate, after, dodging about the room for a minute or more the officers of the law suddenly leaped on him and pinned him to the ground. Gagged and bound they took him on board a steamlaunch kept ready to start, and carried him in triumph to Shanghal . His examination was conducted held, but Chen stuck to the golden rule of silence. The time was past midnight and the whistling of the wind through the trees was strongly suggestive of ghosts and goblins to the imgination of the ignorant rustic. He quickened his pace, when lot in front of him stood a tall apparition with glaring eyes, tongue hanging down two or three feet from its cavernous jaws, and hands like claws. It was clad in a white hempen gown embroidered with white cloth fringes. Phosphorescent lights shone all about the strange creature's head. The rustic imagined this must be the devil himself or at least a near relation, and gave a shrick and fainted? How long he lay in a swoon he know not a He woke in broad daylight, to find that his bundle and the clothing of his own person were gone. Congratulating himself on his narrow, escape he plodded home. Great precautions are being taken in Yang-chow by the civil and military authorities. Patrols are out night and day. The air is filled with agitating rumours. . Lately the news of the capture of arms in Shaughai has caused much anxiety to the officials, who are now making search for implements of war and suspicious characters. Detachments of soldiers are called out to render assistance to the civil authorities. It is also reported that the Nanking Viceroy has sent a high official with a military and naval force to guard all the approaches to Yangchow, as it is the key, from a military point of view, to Chinkiang, Hweichen on the Grand Canal, and Chin-kiangpu. Three prisoners were forwarded to Nanking for trial from the Kuyang district. These men were neither monks, nor priests, but a kind of cross between the two as far as their dress was concerned . It is said that the prisoners in company with twenty others were staying in a dilapidated old temple in Kuyang. As they appeared to be simply barmless mendicants, the authorities did not deem it necessary to order them away. One day one of their number died and there was great lamentation on the part of the others. A petty military official commanding a patrol passed by took pity on them and promised to give them a dollar towards the funeral expenses of the deceased. When he started on his seturn he forgot all about the promise he had made and did not bring the dollar. On finding this out the crowd of mendicants set upon him. Feeling sure that no mere beggins would dare to act as they were doing, he called his guards and ordered them to arrest the supposed mendicants. There were captured, the rest taking to flight. On searching the place, yellow flags, with seals stamped on them were found under the strawbeds. These apparently, wretched people, were members of the Kolso Hul. The prisoners are awaiting their trial.

CHINAN FU.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.) September 21st, 1891.

The students have all come out from the Hail. and the majority have gone home. There has been a little grumbling at the management of the Provincial Chancellor, and invidious comparisons made with the late Governor, who exerted himself to give favors to the student class and thereby secure popularity.

Reld was also expecting to do something in the | the steamer Hk. Tis. 500.-Mercury. same line, books having been kindly sent by the Society for the Diffusion of Christian and General Knowledge, and by some funds left for the purpose by the late Dr. Williamson. Unfortunately the agent at Cheloo has failed to get the boxes transferred in time. Other boxes that left in June have not yet reached here for the bookshop, and so the opportunity for sales has been lost, to say nothing of the loss in money.

A few days since a magistrate near here, who has previously furnished proclamations to Mr. Reid for chapels in his district, sent to him, to get a list of all the chapels, the pative evangelists, the buildings as purchased, leased or rented, and also other villages where Christians were living. The intent was to afford better protection and avoid trouble. The headmen of the villages named on the list were to receive instructions that no disturbance should be allowed. We presume this is due to the orders issued by the Peking Government to all the Provinces, to have all chapels reported to the local officials.

The new Governor is intending to devote his time to the Yellow River, and foreign affairs are placed in the charge of the Taotai. All classes are loud in praises of the late Governor, and denunciations of the present one. The last one used money freely, while the present one says there is no money to use. Where he is stopping, at Lok'ou, the port of this city, he spends less] than half what was spent by his predecessor, and so friends are rapidly disappearing. Still for our part we confess to an ignorance of the way the late Governor could spend money, get in debt with the Throne and Board of Revenue, and yet receive such high honours and favour at his death. One explanation given us by an expectant official was that the late Governor not only spent money on all classes in the Province, butalso with the proper persons in Peking, and so prevented a murmur or degradation. He who has studied Chinese politics can understand somewhat the probabilities. Another explanstion is that during his many years as high military official in Ili, the Throne owed him and his soldiers large amounts, something over a million of taels, and that the debts incurred here merely balanced the previous one of the Throne, That he was ready to help others, and was free from all avarice for himself or his family, is praiseworthy as compared with what too often occurs in China. Whatever the way favour was secured, the career of such a man from a poor boy to a high official, praised by Emperor and by beggar, by the scholar and by the ignorant, certainly testifies to the ability that must have existed, and he remains in Chinese history one of the most romantic of characters.

WHAT WILL RUSSIA DOP

There would seem to be something very significant in the presence of General Alikhanoff the Russian soldier and diplomat, in Cabul in disguise. He was captured while dressed as a Moslem devotee, and although he disclaimed any direct connection with Russia, having left her military service, he is detained by the Ameer of Afghanistan as a spy, which he undoubtedly is. Across the vast expanse of Russia, along her western frontier, troops are being concentrated in great numbers. It is asserted that on the Polish frontier there are now 500,000 soldiers, and that the avenues of communication with the interior of the empire are kept constantly at the disposition of the military authorities, so that even more men can be massed on the frontier in case of necessity.

If Russia thinks that England intends to take on the Dardanelles affair in earnest it would not be unnatural that she should seek to create a diversion in Afghanistan and-along the border of British India. Alikhanoff may have been sent to sound the Afghans and to find out how they would be affected toward Russia in case of a forward movement; but if so his mission has come to an untimely end.

It is by no means certain that Russia will think it necessary to wait for spring before making war. On the contrary she may prefer an aniumn campaign if her retreat is not covered in case of defeat, in the assurance that the experiment of Mapoleon will not be repeated. The Russian declaration of war against Turkey. which was followed by the Crimean war, was on the 1st day of November, 1853, and most of the hard fighting of the Russo-Turkish war 1877-78 was between September, 1877, and the following

THE GREAT TROUSERS QUESTION.

The Executive Board of the United States Women's National Council has Issued a decree that on and after June 1, 1892, business women -type-writers, sales-girls, cashlers, compositors? and clerks-shall begin wearing trousers. It'ls not clear how the Women's National Council The German Bishop has again returned to proposes is enforce its decree. We understand a second deputy is also to be a maillet, may have been a premonition of a further approach toward uniformity of dress between the sexes. It may, perhaps, be regarded as typical of the determination of women to assert the absolute equality of the two halves of mankind. It is said of a man who is henpecked that his wife wears the breeches. May this movement be notice to husbands that they are all hereafter to belong to the hen-pecked class-without always having the privilege of choosing the hen?

Whatever the true inwardness of the impending revolution may be, it will not encounter much opposition from men. Trousers are a wide institution, in which there is room for both sexes. If the dailings want them, they may have them | HI and welcome. They have plenty of example for coveting the forked garment. To say nothing of the disciples of Mrs. Bloomer and Mrs. Swisshelm in this country, and the shining pre-'cedent set by Dr. Mary Walker, more than onehalf the women of the world are wearing trousers at this moment. An Asiatic or a Turkdsh lady, or a lady from North Africa, would no sooner go out without her trousers than a gentleman would walk down Market-street in like dishabille. Still, if the fashion of trousers once gets a foothold, it will not be checked by considerations of what appears for the hour to be becoming. But that is because our eye is accustomed to see forked raiment on a masculine figure, moulded to masculine proportions. Sculptors generally consider the female form more artistically perfect than the male. The curves are more harmonious and the general effect more pleasing. If that is so, it is prejudice begotten of custom which offends the eve when a well-proportioned woman appears in public in male attire, and after people's taste had been educated to the change, they would rebel against a reactionary movement that threatened to hide so much loveliness from inference."

When Mrs. Bloomer devised the costume which bears her name, which consisted of a pair of trousers and a very short skirt it was satirized all over the world, and a good many women who were disposed to relieve the sex of the dragging weight of many skirts were bullied into rejecting it. But most of the criticisms were the work of men to whom female underclothing must always be a mystery. The blow which killed the reform in England was a sentence in the London Times. written by a male ignoramus. "I, Mary Jones, of S. Galton Street, Great Howard Street, Liverpool, declars as follows :

"I have suffered all my life from weakness of the stomach and sluggish liver. I was always tired and languid, and often troubled with billious headache. My appetite was poor, . I never had desire for food, and what I did eat did not digest properly. I had always a bad taste in my mouth, and a slimy scuin would cover my mouth and teeth, and so bad was this that I was obliged to rinse it away before esting. When I was in my toons I was very weakly and would faint after sitting down to my meals. I had trembling at the heart, with a heavy weight at the cheet, pain at my side, and a strange giddy feeling would come over me. When out walking in the street I used to have to stand and rest for fear of falling. I was also so weak that when going about my work I often had to sit down and rost. At times I had a bad cough and pain in my lungs. I saw doctor after doctor, and was under medical treatment for more than twelve years. One doctor said I was suffering from an enlargement of the liver, another said I had heart disease, a third said my lungs were congested and The man who kills two organ-grinders where | that I could not recover. "In July, 1890, after a bad fainting I became so had I had to take to my bed, and was attended by three doctors for a month. The first doctor who saw me said I could not recover. I had intense pains in my stomach, and could get nothing to pass my bowels. Various means were tried and found useless. I could take liquid food only and was fast sinking; my case being considered hopeless by both the physican and the nurse. At this time it was that my husband heard through Mr. Parry, the chemist in Great Howard Street, of a medicine called Mother Seigel's Curative Syrup, and we were presented with a book which described a case just like mine having been cured by it. My husband procured a bottle of this medicine and I began taking it. After a few with him; he suffers all the year round from experienced great relief, and shortly after felt as if I wanted something to eat. When the doctor called said, Mrs. Jones, we have given you the right medicine at last. He thought it was his last bottle that had worked, the change, whereas the nurse had put the medicine in the supposed untouched. I went on with Mother Seigel's Syrup, and to the delight of my husband, father, and nurse I never looked behind me. All the pain at the heart and chest gradually left me, and in a fortnight I was strong enough to be removed to the seaside, and have "I never felt so well in my life as I do now. All
